

Testimony of Will Gonzalez, Executive Director of Ceiba, Second Public Hearing on Congressional Redistricting of the Pennsylvania Senate State Government Committee

Buenos dias - Good morning.

My name is Will Gonzalez. I am the Executive Director of Ceiba. Ceiba is a coalition of Latino community-based organizations in Philadelphia whose mission is to promote the economic development and financial inclusion of Philadelphia's Latino community through collaborations and advocacy aimed at ensuring their access to quality housing.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to testify today.

Redistricting is not easy, but it is not rocket science. Basic principles of demographics and geography guide the redistricting process. Among these is the important concept of communities of interest, i.e., groups of people who live in a specific location, have collective interests, and share many things in common: customs, arts, social institutions, achievements and challenges.

The prioritization of communities of interest in redistricting in Pennsylvania is vital. We are heartened that this is recognized by the Pennsylvania House Republican Caucus, which offers those interested in providing input on the Pennsylvania Congressional Redistricting process the opportunity to draw the boundaries of their community of interest using an online mapping tool on PAredistricting.com (<http://www.paredistricting.com/input>).

We respectfully request that you follow that website's guidance to focus on communities of interest. We urge you to draw Congressional Districts taking into account the streets, neighborhoods, and important hubs that make communities unique; consider landmarks, cultural districts, industries, employers, where kids go to school, where families go to church and the location of neighborhood based and social service organizations which serve them.

Hispanics live in all parts of the City but most Latinos live in Eastern North Philadelphia. The Latino community of Eastern North Philadelphia epitomizes the definition of a Community of Interest. It is a self-defined group of people who share bilingual and bicultural characteristics; that have their own culturally and linguistically appropriate nonprofit organizations, churches, schools, business corridors, and social institutions; that share common interests; and live in a compact urban footprint without geographic barriers.

The backbone of the Eastern North Philadelphia's Latino community is a robust network of nonprofit organizations. A 2018 study by students from the University of Pennsylvania's Masters of City Planning found that 15 Latino nonprofits leveraged $86 million in government grants to sustain 4,160 local jobs, generate $222 million in wages and salaries, build 1,333 new homes, and rehab nearly 10,000 housing units. While the full benefits of these investments are incalculable, they are collectively worth at least $517 million per year. At that time, these 15 nonprofits transformed the social and physical landscape for some 124,000 households and 1,900 businesses in Philadelphia. The work of these non-profits continues to benefit the community today.

The importance of the Latino community to the Commonwealth and the City of Philadelphia cannot be overstated. But for the Latino community, Pennsylvania would have lost more than one Congressional seat. Pennsylvania's population only grew about 0.7% between 2010 and 2019 or just under 100,000 people. In the same period, Pennsylvania's Hispanic population grew about 35%, or by 256,447 people. Growth in the Hispanic population far outpaced that of the whole state and successfully offset the declines in population of other ethno-racial groups in the Commonwealth.

In Philadelphia, the total population of the City grew by about 3%, or by 58,058 people, between 2010 and 2019. During the same period, the Hispanic population of Philadelphia grew by about 28%, or 52,922 people. Philadelphia's population growth was fueled by the growth of its Latino population.

Today, the Latino community of Eastern North Philadelphia fits within Pennsylvania's Second Congressional District, and makes up 27% of its constituency. We request that you keep this community of interest intact. It is best for the economic development of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to keep the Latino community of Eastern North Philadelphia in one piece within one Congressional District.

Ceiba looks forward to continuing this dialogue about redistricting with the Pennsylvania Legislature. Ceiba believes that we can work together with this Committee to ensure that Pennsylvania's redistricting process:

- Actively engages the public at every step of the process
- Draws maps in a manner which accurately reflect changes in the Commonwealth's population
- Avoids gerrymandering, and
- Takes affirmative steps to ensure that reapportionment does not run counter to the protections offered by the:
  - US and Pennsylvania Constitutions
  - Voting Rights Act, and
  - Principle of one person, one vote

Thank you for your attention to this matter.
